5th Ibero-American Summit for the Respiratory Community

Shane Fitch

President of Lovexair Foundation

Our 5th Ibero-American Summit is analyzing the current challenges faced in research and significant investment required for respiratory diseases.

In a world with increased exposures and vulnerabilities to climate change and infectious diseases; the numbers of people impacted by respiratory conditions, are on the rise. Yet, we are faced with increased cost of drug development, reduced therapeutic pipelines and fewer resources in personal care support, for chronic and rare lung diseases. Not to mention, equal access to healthcare for all.

We ask key stakeholders from scientific, clinical and industry backgrounds, to share their concerns on the first day of the V Respiratory Community Summit and follow-up on the second, by bringing patient organization leadership from diverse communities together, to deliver their opinions, concerns, insights & points of view on how these issues affect us and how should we address these critical societal needs in respiratory health.

Leaders in lung research, biobanks, technology, healthcare industry and institutions will join this forum to unite with key stakeholders: patients and healthcare professionals to deliberate on why this research & support from public-private- third sector, is so important to the future of a healthy, prosperous global society.
